

HUMANITIES AND THE SUNSHINE STATE

TEACHING FLORIDA'S CLIMATES

In partnership with the Florida Humanities Council

CALLING ALL EDUCATORS!

Join us for a five-day, four-night interdisciplinary exploration of Florida's changing climates!

June 19-23, 2017

Using culture, history, and ethics to examine our contemporary challenges, this seminar will pair leading professors and master teachers from across the humanities and ecological sciences to give educators the tools to observe and analyze environmental change.

The seminar is rooted in the unique history and culture of North Central Florida. Through hands-on activities and field trips, we will examine archival climate data, walk through the Austin Cary Forest, dive into Florida's springs, explore Native American adaptations to sea level rise along the Gulf Coast, and enjoy locally-sourced meals. Educators will learn a variety of tools, including, carbon measurement, ethical inquiry, ecosystem mapping, journalism, and oral history to help students understand and consider the need to adapt to a changing climate. We will learn how teaching Florida's climates will affect the decisions we must make about our collective future.

Enjoy free accommodation in the UF Reitz Union Hotel and the opportunity to explore Gainesville and North Central Florida with new friends.

This seminar is open to all educators: certified K-12 public or private school teachers of any subject, media specialists, librarians, guidance counselors, school and district administrators, state college professors, museum educators, and National Park Service and Florida State Park interpreters. Documentation for In-Service credits will be provided.
